It is the food digested, not the food swallowed, that really counts;

And food digests much better if it is attractive in appearance and tastes good,

For that makes the mouth water, which means the digestive juices flow properly.

Every dish at CHILDS is prepared and cooked with this principle in mind,

And served in clean and comfortable dining rooms, which is a further aid to good digestion.

SAW WOMEN MEET AFTER BRUNEN DIED

Mrs. Batur's Tale of Visit Connects Up Powell's Shooting Story.

BOTH STOOD ON PORCH

Prosecutor Thinks Missing Witness Reported Slaying Got Away Safely.

MOHR'S GIFTS RELATED

Mrs. Powell Says Alleged Investigator Kept Husband Supplied With Money.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Dec. 14.—Mrs. Mary Bauer, witness in the murder of John Brunen, the circus man, at Riverside on March 10, for which Mrs. Doris Brunen, widow, and Harry C. Mohr, brother-in-law, are on trial here, told today of seeing a woman wearing a fur neckpiece talking to a woman evidently connected with the Brunen house on the porch of the house about 7:30 on the night of the murder.

This information is being used by the prosecution to show that Mrs. Brunen, who was the only person with her husband at the time he was shot from outside the house by Charles M. Powell, was advised by the mysterious woman that Powell and Mohr were safely away in the motor car that was driven and owned by Mohr. It is a connecting link that lacks only identification of the woman with the neckpiece, there being every reason to believe that it was Mrs. Brunen who answered the mysterious woman's call at the door.

Mrs. Bauer said in part: "I left my home west of Cambridge station about 7:20 on the night of March 10 to go to the Catholic church in Riverside. I reached the Cambridge station in about five minutes and saw a man run toward the station and jump into a small car that was evidently being held for him. The car was backed, turned around and driven away in a hurry. I was frightened when I saw the man, but I decided that nothing would happen to me and I continued on.

The Connecting Link.
"I heard the two men say something when the running car reached the car, but do not know what they said. The lights were not on the car when it was driven away toward Camden. I had to pass the Brunen house to get to the church where I was going and when I got there I saw two women on the porch. This was a little after 7:30. The woman out on the porch had on a fur neckpiece and the stout woman standing at the doorway had on a house dress. It was a wet night and I was holding an umbrella. I couldn't tell much about the fellow I saw running toward the car, but he was short and rather heavy set for a man of his height."

Mrs. Bauer saw the women talking at 7:30. Five minutes later, Dr. Stuart Maul, of Riverside, says he was called by Mrs. Brunen and told to come to her house immediately as something terrible had happened.

This was at least a half hour after the shooting had been done, about the time that it would take for Powell to run across the fields from the Brunen house to the Cambridge station and for a woman to walk from the station to the Brunen house to tell Mrs. Brunen of the safe getaway of the slayers and the principal conspirator. The prosecution hopes to produce a witness who saw a strange woman about the Cambridge station while Mohr's motor car was there and who disappeared immediately after it had been driven away.

Mrs. Powell Implicates Mohr.
Mrs. Charles M. Powell, wife of the man who did the actual shooting, was also a witness. She has two children, one 16 months and the other 2 months old, the latter born since Mrs. Powell has been living in Mount Holly to be near her husband. Outstanding in her testimony was her conviction that Mohr was dominated by Mohr, because Mohr provided the money with which the family was being kept.

"Charlie is good at heart," she said, "and I have always done everything he has told me. Anything he tells me is all right, because he wouldn't lie to me. It was the money that bought us our daily bread that caused Charlie to submit to the influence of Mohr. He grasped money to Charlie, paid our room rent in Camden, called nearly every day to see Charlie and frequently gave him money. At 5:30 on the morning after the shooting he came to our house with $50 and another time he gave him $100. "After Charlie had been arrested I went to the Brunen house and told Doris that Charlie had been kidnapped; and Doris said: 'Hush, I don't want Bessie to hear it.' Harry gave me $10 then; once he gave me money to pay Charlie's Masonic dues, and I think that altogether he gave me $50 for my use after Charlie was arrested. Not until Charlie had been arrested was I suspicious that he had anything to do with the crime. It was the way we had to depend on Harry Mohr for a living that caused Charlie to fall for the money."

Mrs. Powell's appearance aroused sympathy, which took the form of a collection of $40 for her for Christmas. The cross-examination brought out many details of Powell's reduced financial condition.

"I didn't think Charlie could ever do anything like that even for money for us," said Mrs. Powell when she was on cross-examination about what she knew of Charlie's movements on the night of the murder. Pressed for something definite about time, she flashed out, "He wouldn't tell me he was going to kill someone, would he?" Mrs. Powell said that she was sick that night and was in bed when Charlie left the house. She thought he got back about 7:30 after being out about two hours. She said that every day for some time after the murder, Mohr came to their house to see Charlie. It was Mohr who told her the next morning that Brunen had been shot.

Larry Doyle, 22 years old, showed that feeling of a bitter kind existed between Mohr and Brunen as early as May, 1921. Doyle, who was connected with the Brunen show at Salamanca, N. Y., that May, said he saw the two have a fight and Brunen said to Mohr: "Get off this lot, or I'll kick you to hell off. I'm running this show, not you."

"All right," Mohr replied, "but I'll get this show sooner or later."

In November, 1921, Doyle saw Mohr and Powell talking together in a res-

BLIND MAN LOSES THE DOG THAT SERVED AS HIS EYES

Joe McDonough, Former Newsboy, Had Been Guided by Shimmy for Years, but Now He's Helpless, With Nothing but Humans to Depend On.

Shimmy, who besides being a brindle dog has been the eyes of Joe McDonough since he lost his sight in an explosion six years ago, slipped her leash yesterday morning while he was exercising her, and now Joe is helpless. He has to depend on human beings to lead him around and help him do things. The blind man hoped the dog would be able to find her way back to the Hotel Marlborough, where they have been living, and from 8 o'clock yesterday morning until 8 last night he stood heartily in front of the hotel in the snow, rain and sleet.

But the dog did not come and nobody came who had seen her. All of the policemen in the district who know Joe looked for Shimmy, but they could not find her. At 9 o'clock, tired and cold and hungry, Joe stumbled into the hotel and went to his room. He went to bed without the usual round of play with the dog that had been his constant companion for so many years. Meanwhile the police had sent out an alarm for the dog and other agencies were enlisted in the search by Mrs. Jacob M. Ehrlich, president of the Horse Aid Society, who also lives at the Marlborough.

It is because of Mrs. Ehrlich that a taurant in Wilkesbarre for an hour and a half, and heard Mohr say: "I can't do it myself." Powell replied, "Don't make too much noise; some one will hear us."

Walter Ernest, at whose house in Camden the Powells had rooms, said that Mohr visited the Powells frequently, and he was there on the night of the murder, between 7:30 and 8 o'clock. Ernest said that he saw Powell in the house about 7:30 or 7:45 that night. Some time after the murder Mohr said to this witness, "You know Charlie was home that night."

Bessie Mohr, wife of Harry, who participated in the dramatic scene in court yesterday while Hazel Brunen was testifying, was permitted to be in the court room to-day, with an understanding that nothing would be heard from her. Harry Mohr was somewhat recovered from his partial collapse yesterday when Hazel was giving damaging testimony against him, and saying that he believed the entire Mohr family was in the conspiracy to kill her father, Mrs. Brunen's manner was confident.

EIGHTH AVE. SUBWAY PLAN SENT TO CITY

Transit Commission Perfects Its Scheme for New West Side Link.

COST TO BE $69,500,000

Eleven Mile Line Would Run From Chambers St. to Old Billings Place.

LENOX TRAFFIC DIVERTED

Seventh Avenue Trains Would Run Only on Dyckman-Van Cortlandt Division.

The Transit Commission announced last night that it had submitted to the Board of Estimate its plan for the proposed Eighth avenue-Overlook terrace station at Hudson and Chambers streets and West Broadway to Overlook Terrace, opposite 192d street and near the former C. K. G. Billings estate.

The line would be eleven miles long and take the following route from Chambers street: Up Hudson street to Abingdon square, thence up Eighth avenue to Fifty-seventh street, west in Fifty-seventh street to Tenth avenue, up Tenth and Amsterdam to 155th street, across Broadway and into Port Washington avenue at 159th street, and up Port Washington avenue to the terminal on the highest part of Manhattan Island.

At various points the line would connect with present and other proposed subways. At Amsterdam avenue and 103d street it would cut into the present Lenox avenue line and all traffic from that line would be diverted into it, thus relieving the present West Side subway.

Could Begin in Nine Months.

If the Board of Estimate approves it is estimated that actual construction could be commenced within nine months. The first work would be at Eighth avenue and Forty-first street for a connection with the Queensboro extension.

This subway is one of seven proposed by the Transit Commission last May. It would have thirty-eight miles of track and for part of the distance be in six separate tubes. All of it would be linked with some part of the transit system now in use and be built in substantially the following order:

(a) The first full section would run from Forty-first street to Fourteenth street, on the west side of the avenue. Eventually a similar double decked structure carrying four additional tracks would be built on the east side. At Forty-first street would be the connection with the Queensboro extension and at Fourteenth street the connection with the Fourth street Eastern District line to Brooklyn. These two connections would afford a through loop service to the Queensboro and Fourteenth street lines.

(b) The second building stage, south in Eighth avenue and Hudson street, would carry the line from Fourteenth street to the terminal at Chambers street, where passengers desiring to go further south in Manhattan or across to Brooklyn could transfer to the present Broadway-Seventh avenue line.

(c) The third step would cover the section north, again as a two deck, four track subway, on the westerly side of Eighth avenue to Fifty-seventh street, and thence by way of Amsterdam avenue to 103d street, where the traffic of the Lenox avenue branch would be diverted to it.

(d) As the fourth and final stage, the line would be continued on a four track, single level up Amsterdam avenue to 155th street, thence with three tracks up Port Washington avenue to Overlook Terrace. This unit would provide wholly new facilities for the densely populated territory that has developed in upper Manhattan since the building of the first subway. There would be a new express service from 155th street to Fourteenth street.

The estimated cost of the Eighth avenue line by sections would be: (a) $12,000,000; (b) $7,500,000; (c) $24,000,000; (d) $26,000,000, a total of $69,500,000.

Sing Sing Has No Vacancy for Poet, So He Gets Pick

SING SING PRISON attendants asked James Morrissey what his business was when he arrived there yesterday to begin a two year sentence for carrying a concealed weapon in Westchester county.

He replied that he was a poet. "What do you want to work at in prison?" asked the attendants. "Writing poetry," said Morrissey. He was told that writing poetry was not on the approved list of jobs for convicts, and he was put to work with a pick and shovel.

$69,500,000. This would represent approximately one-third of the cost of the commission's entire five year building program, which for construction alone is $218,000,000. Sections (a) and (b) of the proposed new line would require a little over three years to build, and sections (c) and (d) four years.

The Board of Estimate, under the rapid transit act, is required to fix dates for public hearings on any new route or routes submitted by the Transit Commission within ten days of their presentation.

QUIZ SOCIETY MEN ABOUT LIQUOR CHECKS

Racquet and Tennis Club Members Testify.

The Federal Grand Jury's investigation into the alleged use of liquor at the Racquet and Tennis Club was continued yesterday. Eight witnesses testified. They were Harry Knapp, president of the organization, 270 Park avenue; Effingham Townsend Irvin, treasurer of the club; Ford Huntington, vice-president of the New York Telephone Company and one of the board of managers of the club; Roderick Terry, Jr., Philip L. Foster, U. Lawrence Waterbury, Whitney Warren of the firm of Warren and Wetmore, architects, 18 East Forty-seventh street, and Charles Presbury.

Several witnesses, according to Federal building attaches, were asked to explain checks made payable to a West Thirty-fourth street firm formerly in the wholesale liquor business.

RECEIVER APPOINTED FOR THE METROPOLITAN

Magazine's Liabilities $300,000, With Assets More.

Judge Julian W. Mack in United States District Court yesterday appointed Franklin Coe receiver in equity for the Metropolitan Publications Corporation, 434 Fourth avenue, publishers of the Metropolitan Magazine.

The suit in equity against the publishing company was filed by Saul S. Myers, 60 Wall street, attorney for the National Rotary Graveure Corporation, with a claim for $5,000. The bill alleges that the defendant is unable to meet immediate pressing obligations; that suits are threatened or have been begun and that a receiver is necessary to preserve the assets and continue the publication pending a reorganization.

The liabilities of the company are alleged to be about $300,000, with assets said to exceed this amount. Mr. Coe was instructed by Judge Mack to continue the operation of the business until further orders from the court. The company was placed in the hands of a receiver with the consent of Edward V. McKown, counsel for the defendant. H. J. Whigham is the editor of the magazine.
